Tom A. Renick, E. Main street, and John E. Walters, Circleville township, were reelected chairmen of the Pickaway county Republican Executive and Central committees, respectively, Tuesday evening in organization sessions held in the Common Pleas courtroom.

Claude Kraft, E. Main street, was reelected as secretary of the Central committee. The Executive committee de-

G. O. P. OF OHIO TO KEEP SCHORR AS PARTY CHIEF

COLUMBUS, Aug. 17.—(UP)—Republican party chieftains in Ohio meet here today to chart their political strategy for the fall campaign against the Democrats and to arrange for the biennial state convention to be held either late this month or early in September.

All members of the Republican state central committee which generally is composed of the same members who headed district Republican organizations two years ago have been asked to attend.

Unlike the Democratic state central committee meeting next week, the Republican meeting is not expected to produce much change in the high command for the state. There was an almost unanimous belief that Ed D. Schorr, Cincinnati, present state chairman, would be retained in that position.

Mrs. Mary L. Forrest, Cleveland, is vice chairman, and Nolan Boggs, Toledo, secretary-treasurer. The state central committee probably will follow the practice of other years and resolve itself into the party's executive committee, officers of the former group serving as officers of the executive committee as well. The custom is different from that of the Democrats who customarily elect separate sets of officers for each committee.

Showers and slightly cooler temperatures were predicted for late Wednesday, giving Circleville residents hopes of at least temporary relief from the torrid weather. At 1 p. m. Wednesday the temperature was 84, only four degrees above the recording at 8 a. m. Clouded skies and rainfall of .05 of an inch Wednesday at noon provided some relief from the heat.

Tuesday's highest temperatures were 91 degrees, two below the highest recordings on Sunday and Monday. Lowest mark for the night was 75.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—(UP)—Sultry weather again settled over New England today in the wake of a severe electrical storm and cyclone that killed three persons, wrecked an amusement park and caused widespread other damage.

The storm brought only temporary relief from a two-day heat wave blamed for 11 deaths.

In Massachusetts, severest damage was wrought by a cyclone that cut a 300-foot wide swath through the Whalom lake amusement park in Lunenburg.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—(UP)—The terrific wave continued unbroken today along the Eastern seaboard.

In the metropolitan area, two persons died and 17 were prostrated. More than 100,000 roamed the beaches sleepless for the second successive night. Other hundreds of thousands slept on lawns, beaches, rooftops and in parks.

Children of the First Avenue slum area went on a sit-down strike demanding a street sprinkler. The American Labor party went to their aid and began circulating a petition.

DOCTOR NAMED AS WIFE KILLER BY CORONER JURY

LACLEDE, Mo., Aug. 17.—(UP)—Dr. William F. Lamance went to the funeral of his wife in Williamsburg, Kans., today, but he must return here tonight to face charges of murdering her.

A coroner's jury last night recommended a first degree murder charge against the osteopathic surgeon, the town's only physician, after an inquest which lasted almost nine hours. After deliberating an additional hour, the jury decided that Mrs. Ella Lamance, 29, had come to her death by foul means, and accused her husband.

Max Brown, county sheriff, found her body in a vegetable cellar Monday night, after she had been missing for almost a week.

Lamance, former light heavyweight amateur boxer, said he had been on a fishing trip with several other men, and when he returned last week his wife was gone. He did not report her absence to authorities, however, until Monday after he had completed a trip to Manitou, Colo., to visit his mother Mrs. Lora Lamance, an evangelist.

O'CONNOR, FOE OF F. D., TO CAMPAIGN ON BOTH TICKETS

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—(UP)—Rep. John J. O'Connor, Democratic chairman of the house rules committee, whom President Roosevelt formally added yesterday to the New Deal's "purge" list, was campaigning for renomination today on both the Democratic and Republican tickets.

Before the time for filing designating petitions ended last midnight, O'Connor had opposition on both party tickets. Harry W. McHose, former secretary of the national Republican club, was the choice of the regular Republican organization, and James H. Fay, Deputy collector of internal revenue, filed as a Democrat. The American Labor party was backing Fay who also is the "100 percent New Deal" candidate.

O'Connor appealed for Republican support on the grounds that he had opposed New Deal projects and voted his "conscience," just as a Republican would have done. The New York Primary will be Sept. 20.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—(UP)—President Roosevelt leaves the capital again today after a five day stay during which he projected the threat of a party purge to primaries in every state where congressional candidates for renomination have "betrayed" the New Deal.

He will board his special train this afternoon for Kingston, Ont., where he will receive an honorary degree from Queens college tomorrow. Before returning to his home at Hyde Park, he and Canadian Prime Minister MacKenzie King will dedicate a new international bridge in the Thousand Islands. ### FIVE FUGITIVE CONVICTS SLAIN

Four Of Men Shot, Other Found Floating In Texas River

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Aug. 17.—(UP)—Five of the eight convicts who escaped from the East-ham prison farm yesterday have been killed, penitentiary officials said today.

Four of the fugitives were shot to death in battles with guards, Capt. J. P. Hamilton, manager of the farm, reported. The body of a fifth man was found floating in the Trinity river.

Hamilton said that two men were shot to death today. They were Raymond Wilkerson and John Hendrix Frazier.

In an earlier battle a few hours after the break, guards killed Jack Kinsley, Oklahoma City desperado, and Charles Aaron.

Hamilton said that the man found in the river had not been identified, but that he was a convict.

W. E. Garner, Beaumont gunman under a 100-year sentence for shooting a state highway patrolman, was captured today.

The eight convicts escaped yesterday after stabbing a guard, John Greer. They took Greer's shotgun.

TRIP TO POLICE COURT FOLLOWS SUICIDE THREAT

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 17.—(UP)—Noreen Leonard, 24, today was charged with disturbing the peace for sitting on the tenth-floor ledge of a hotel window for more than an hour and threatening to jump.

Two thousand persons gathered in the street and watched Miss Leonard as she alternately sat on the ledge and on a chair balanced near the edge of the building.

Just when it appeared she was preparing to leap to the street, George Course, assistant fire chief, and Dion Crocker, business man, jumped from a window to the ledge and "rabbed her."

Miss Leonard struggled with her rescuers but they pulled her back through the window and turned her over to police.

Beer flowed freely over Route 23 about two miles south of Circleville Wednesday at 6 a. m.

Traffic was tied up when a Consumers Beer Co. truck of Newark overturned. The driver told state highway patrolmen he was crowded off the road.

In turning over, the top of the truck was broken open and beer was thrown into the highway. No one was hurt.

Families Of Defendant And Prosecutor In Court For Sessions

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—(UP)—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey directly accused James J. Hines, one of Tammany Hall's most powerful district chieftains, today of receiving from $500 to $1,000 a week for five years, for "taking care of protection" for the Dutch Schultz policy racket monopoly.

The eloquent prosecutor, fighting the biggest battle of his racket-busting career, accused the former blacksmith of conspiring with "the Dutchman" to create a racket monopoly which flourished from 1931 to 1937 under political protection allegedly supplied by Hines.

The gray-haired politician listened closely as Dewey formally began what Hines has called "just another political fight."

Hines came into court early, before his counsel arrived. Asked if he were alone, he grinned and pointed to a row of attractively dressed women who had taken seats in the courtroom.

"Alone?" Hines said. "Not on your life."

The women were Mrs. Hines, Sr., Mrs. James J. Hines, Jr., Mrs. Philip A. Hines, and Mrs. Eugene Hines, the defendant's wife and daughters-in-law. His three sons also were in the courtroom.

NAZI DIRIGIBLE ALMOST READY TO GO IN AIR

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Aug. 17.—(UP)—The new German dirigible LZ130, successor to the ill-fated Hindenburg, has been completed and will be filled with hydrogen soon, it was learned today.

It was recalled that after the United States decided not to sell helium to Germany, officials determined to fill the ship with hydrogen, at least for a trial flight.

Zeppelin company sources still reckoned on the possibility of obtaining helium from the United States, but if all efforts are unsuccessful it was expected that technicians would be set to the task of developing an adequate substitute.

WIFE OF SOUTH AFRICAN GIVES BIRTH TO THIRD SET OF TRIPLETS, CLAIM

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Aug. 17.—(UP)—The wife of a railroad employe, named Groenewald, gave birth today to her third set of triplets at Frankfort, Orange Free State, according to dispatches received here.

The couple was married in 1926 and has had 14 children including twins. Eight are alive.

In Hines Trial

AMONG the many figures playing prominent roles in the sensational policy racket trial of James J. Hines, Tammany district leader, in New York include Mrs. Richard Davis, the wife of J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, former lawyer of the late policy king, Dutch Schultz, who has turned state's evidence against Hines. It has been rumored Mrs. Davis would seek a divorce from him when the trial has ended. When arrested, Davis was found in the company of Hope Dare, former showgirl, listed as his sweetheart.

SOLON CLAIMS OFFICIALS AID 'REDS' LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—(UP)—Rep. Noah Mason, R., Ill., charged today that eight high federal officials are members of the American League for Peace and Democracy which he asserted is an arm of the Communist party front.

Mason, a member of the house committee investigating un-American activities, placed the names of the officials in the committee record.

Members of the organization, he said, include:

Oscar Chapman, assistant secretary of interior; John Carmody, administrator of the Rural Electrification; Harry Lambertson, assistant R.E.A. administrator, and Fred Silcox, chief of the forestry service.

Mason asserted that Lambertson is chairman of the Washington unit of the league; that Dallas W. Smythe, economist in the central statistical bureau, is vice-president of the local, and that Silcox is the unit's treasurer.

In addition, he named Robert Marshall, chief of the forestry service's public lands division; Mary Anderson of the labor department's women's bureau; and Alice Barrows of the office of education as other members of the league's Washington unit.

BUTLER COUNTY, STATE SCHOOL RECEIVE MONEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—(UP)—The Public Works administration today approved 40 additional non-federal projects in its building recovery program.

Grants of $3,193,356, representing 45 percent of the building cost, and loans totalling $185,000 today brought total non-federal allotments made to date to $503,103,314.

Today's list of approvals was headed by a grant to Butler county, Ohio, for a court house and four institutional buildings to cost $1,600,000. Ohio State university received a grant of $870,000 for dormitories.

UNIVERSAL ANARCHY HIT

Shanghai Fears Japanese May Attempt To Take Settlement

BY UNITED PRESS

The United States again today sought to exert moral strength in a world struggle for peaceful return to international law and order.

With world capitals nervously seeking to quiet threats of international conflict in Spain, Czechoslovakia and the Far East, Secretary of State Cordell Hull made America's most vigorous contribution to preservation of Democratic government by warning that a general conflict could be averted only by reviewing the trend toward anarchy.

The secretary's declaration was more far-reaching than past statements because of its forceful language and of the circumstances in which it was issued.

Hull necessarily iterated the United States opposition to foreign entanglements but he spoke at a moment calculated to be most helpful to Great Britain's program for averting an explosion in Central Europe; to aid in counteracting war tension caused by Germany's great army maneuvers coincident with intensification of the Czech minority crisis.

No Middle Ground
He asserted, moreover, that there is no middle ground for either large or small nations in the struggle to re-establish international security.

And he left no doubt that—if the next World War cannot be avoided—the United States will be allied with defenders of democracy.

Thus the secretary carried one step further the program which he has persistently advanced as the only hope for future peace. That program is based on conviction that the modern trend of international relations—tinged with big league banditry, bluff, piracy and outlaw aggression—must slowly be turned back to a legal foundation. To achieve that objective, he holds that the United States must do its part or be drawn into the chaos otherwise inevitable.

In this manner, Hull has two actual frontiers in American foreign policy. One is definite: the consolidation of the two Americas for peace on the basis of the Monroe Doctrine. The second is indefinite and much broader: the active use of moral force parallel to other great democratic powers such as Britain and France in the uphill

ANTI-LITTERING ACTION TO FACE COUNCIL TEST

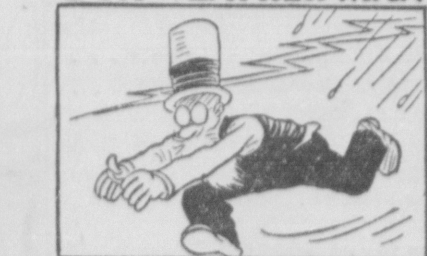

Ordinance to eliminate Circleville's "waste paper menace," which would prevent the distribution of handbills and other advertising matter in public places and in or on parked automobiles, will be up for its final test in council Wednesday night. The legislation will be given its third reading.

Violators of the ordinance would face possible fines of $5 to $50. The legislation resulted from complaints of the service department which has charge of keeping streets clean. No comments on the legislation were made by councilmen when it was given its first two readings. It was introduced in council by William Reid, chairman of the ordinance committee.

Only other business scheduled to come before council is the 1939 budget.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, said that no new legislation has been requested for the meeting.

MARKET PLANS NOT TO AFFECT OHIO FARMERS

Wheat Insurance Applicants May File Before August 31

POTATOES UNRESTRICTED

Corn Exports To Cut Down Nation's Carryover To Large Degree

COLUMBUS, Aug. 17—(UP)—Late advice on crop programs under the A.A.A. indicate that Ohio farmers will not be affected this year by any potato marketing plan and will not vote on such a plan, that corn marketing will not be restricted in any state, and that applications for wheat insurance can be made up until August 31 in Ohio, according to E. F. Kruse, state chairman.

At one time, the program called for a potato marketing system in Ohio but this plan has been abandoned so Ohio growers will not be asked to vote on the question. The marketing plan for potatoes sold in Ohio from those places.

The closing date on applications for wheat insurance once was announced for Aug. 15, but Mr. Kruse says this date was shifted to the later one at the request of farmers. Ohio has a front place among states for the number of farmers applying for this insurance.

The August 1 crop report on corn disclosed that the total prospective yield and the present carryover would not bring the total corn supply on October 1 above the limit where the law requires a farmers' referendum on marketing quotas. Ohio corn from the 1938 harvest, along with that from all other states, will move to market as fast or as slow as its producers wish.

Exports of corn from the United States for the present marketing year are expected to be 12 times as large as the average exports during the last 10 years. Farmers also planted less than the normal corn acreage this year.

Improvement Of Pasture Essential to Aid Farm

Pasture improvement is one of the essentials of a better farming program in Ohio, according to D. T. Hover and R. R. Barker, Mt. Vernon, who discussed at Ohio State University some of the things they have learned from farmers who are working in Knox and Morrow counties with the Soil Conservation Service.

Mr. Barker says the lessons learned on the rolling pastures in that section indicate that the problem of overgrazing really is a problem of underfeeding. He does not mean that the livestock alone is underfed, the soil itself is so starved that it cannot produce the kind and amounts of pasture plants that it should.

The past history of many pastures, Mr. Barker claims, is in itself an explanation of their present poverty. A great deal of Ohio pasture land was crop land until it became badly eroded or so unproductive that field crops were unprofitable. It then was seeded and usually produced fair quantities of grass for several years.

Mr. Hover declares that some of the farmers working with him have found that close grazing of these pasture lands reduced their productivity and the yields of grasses declined as had the yields of crops previously. Some of the sods on slopes became so thin that gullies started in pasture fields.

The men from the Soil Conservation Service say that the agronomy department at Ohio State University has the answer to this problem of poor pastures. Applications of lime where it is needed, phosphorus to check the hunger of the soil, reseeding the whole field or spots that are producing more weeds than grass, and then good management of the improved pasture and social program.

Mrs. Jesse Rose presided over the short business session. Mrs. Hazel McCollister was devotional leader and chairman of the evening's social program, which was as follows: Violin Solo, Miss Martha Louise Carter of Brown's Chapel accompanied at the piano by Miss Maxine Carter of Clarksburg; Piano Solo, Miss Irene Rice of Chillicothe; Reading, "Works of Methodist Missionaries in South America," Mrs. Charles Rose; Vocal Solo, Miss Olive Rice of Chillicothe accompanied at the piano by Miss Irene Rice; Piano Solo, Miss Jean Evelyn Baker. The meeting closed with a hymn by the Society and the Missionary Benediction. The Mite Box Offering was held at this meeting which amounted to Forty Dollars. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roy Anderson, Thursday afternoon, September 8th.

Mr. and Mrs. George LeMay attended the Goldsberry reunion held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Zummely of Clarksburg, Sunday, August 7th.

Miss Mary Baker of Chillicothe who has been spending her vacation with her sister, Mrs. Annette Brown and other relatives here, returned to her home, Wednesday evening.

CITY BOARD TO PURCHASE ALL SCHOOL BOOKS

Educators Agree To Spend About $2,000 For High Texts

$102,855 NEEDED IN '39

General Expenses To Run About $90,000; Bonds, Interest Down

All high school text books for the 1938-39 school term will be purchased by the board of education. Pupils will have to purchase only their work books, used in some subjects.

The board of education at its regular meeting Tuesday night agreed to purchase all high school books in compliance with state regulations. The purchase will involve an expenditure of about $2,000 for the 1938-39 term. Last year the board purchased some high school text books as a step toward the purchasing of all books this term.

The board approved its 1939 budget to be submitted to the budget commission. General expenses for next year are estimated at $90,065, and bonds and interest $12,790, a total of $102,855. The 1938 budget estimates were $89,937.49 for general expenses and $13,170 for bonds and interest, a total of $103,107.49.

VILLAGE TAKES HISTORIC TREE FOR ITS NAME

PITTSBURGH (UP)—An oak tree that now exists only in the pages of the nation's Colonial history has given its name to the Pittsburgh district's newest community.

Charter Oak, a settlement in Scott township, has been named after the rugged landmark that once helped settle an argument between the domain of Pennsylvania and Virginia.

After the French and Indian War, when a community at the junction of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio rivers grew to mark the site of present-day Pittsburgh, Virginia claimed the town. Pennsylvania argued that the village was within the grant given to William Penn by Charles II, more than a hundred years before.

For the first time, colonists discovered that nobody had taken the trouble to define the limits of Penn's grant.

As surveyors marked the line between the land claimed by Pennsylvania and Virginia, they blazed the large black oak with an axe. A few years ago, the tree, dead and weather-beaten, still showed traces of the blaze. Since then the storms have destroyed the natural marker.

The golden-voiced star of radio, screen and stage has been signed as the singing star of "Fibber McGee and Molly" when that top-flight program returns to the NBC-Red network on Sept. 6.

Singing star of the spectacular Billy Rose production "Jumbo", Novis vacationed after the extended run of the show, to recently return to the spotlight as the hit of the famous "Troadero" in Hollywood, of a Los Angeles production of "Roberta" and a west-coast radio program.

The young star first won national attention as winner of the audition in 1928. Fame on the air, over the National Broadcasting Company network, on the stage and in the movies followed. An athlete as well as a top-flight singer, Novis was a star at football, basketball and swimming during his days at both Pasadena High School and Whittier College. He still maintains his interest in sports as well as singing and keeps physically trim with daily swims.

G. A. Hook and D. H. Ebert while vacationing at Magnetic Springs this week, had some time on their calendar to use in making outside territory and went up to see what they might find at Kenton, county seat of Hardin county. Among the many they contacted there was our once well known community citizen, Orren P. Blue. Mr. Blue is the official abstractor for his county and is kept busy most of the time. We best remember him as having been a member of that "good" Madison township band whose members swiped or roasted more chickens than they could eat at one sitting. There is some honor in the worst of thieves, they say.

'MAD BUTCHER' BLAMED IN TWO MORE MURDERS

Disjointed Human Bones Found On Cleveland Dump

VICTIMS ARE NOS. 12-13

Only Three Identified In Series Of Mysteries On Lake Erie

CLEVELAND, Aug. 17—(UP)—A pile of disjointed human bones, the 13th victim of the "mad butcher of Kingsbury run," was carried to a morgue today from a dump near the waterfront where, late yesterday, the decayed remains of victim No. 12 also were found.

Police experts, especially assigned to hunt the fiend whose atrocities have gone unsolved for four years, pored over the clues that the last two bodies yielded. But they found most of them familiar and discouraging. Both victims were women. One might have been a Negro.

The manner of mutilation and cleavage of the bodies, the papers and boxes into which the pieces were packed, the hopelessness of identification, were all much the same as they had been since the first body—that of a woman, headless and still unidentified—was washed ashore from Lake Erie in September, 1934.

Coroner Samuel R. Gerber, who had spent four hours last night examining the remnants of the 12th butchery, threw up his arms in despair when spectators, attracted to the dump in morbid curiosity, turned up the remains of No. 13.

Only Three Identified

It was the first time that two murders had been discovered in one day. Previously there had been intervals of a month to a year between the finding of victims. Only three of the 13 have been identified; only five of the 13 heads have been found. But all have borne the marks of the same murderer—probably a sexual pervert with a rudimentary knowledge of surgery. Meat market wrapping paper and twine was used frequently to bind up parts of bodies, and there were indications that the body of No. 12, which had not been in the dump for more than a few weeks, had been kept in a refrigerator for months.

Although the new discoveries created great excitement in the city, it was more from curiosity and horror than indignation, because few of the victims were known, none was prominent. One was a prostitute.

Victim No. 12 was found only 800 feet of 9th street, a main thoroughfare that extends to the docks used by Great Lakes passenger liners plying to Buffalo, Detroit and upper lake regions. The body lay less than a quarter of a mile from where ship passengers embark and disembark. The dump is in a sector of reclaimed Lake Erie land dotted with ponds and back-washes, but near the newly opened Lake Shore drive.

Hunting Scrap Metal

Jack Dawson, 21, one in a party of three Negroes, said: "We were coming down here looking for scrap metal to sell. I was going around on the dump and saw a man's coat sleeve sticking out from under the edge of some concrete slabs. I pulled it out and saw bones and flesh."

They called Police Sgt. James Hogan, head of the homicide squad. Detective Peter Merylo, long assigned to the cases, and Coroner Gerber arrived. They summoned Dr. Reuben Strauss, county pathologist.

Gerber decided that the body was that of a white woman, 35, five feet, five inches tall, with light brown or blonde, bobbed hair, weighing 125. She wore a No. 9 shoe. She had unusually large feet but small, delicately-contoured hands and small features. Her hips had been slender, her teeth even. The skin from her left thumb provided a perfect fingerprint.

Like several of the others, her sexual organs had been mutilated and it required hours to determine her sex.

The parts were in four separate packages. The head was in brown wrapping paper of the type usually kept in butcher shops. It had been severed between the third and fourth cervical vertebrae. The torso was wrapped in a man's palm beach or tropical worsted suit and about half of an old patchwork quilt. More wrapping

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU BY BOB BURNS

Many's the time I've done some impulsive thing and thought I was perfectly right in doin' it, but when I'd get home and take my shoes off so's I could really think about it, I've seen that what I'd done wasn't the right thing at all. I suppose everybody's had a similar experience.

I remember one time when Grandpa Snazzy was goin' by Uncle Slug's house and saw him runnin' out of the house with a bunch of dishes flyin' at his head. Grandpa dashed inside just as Aunt at his head. Grandpa dashed inside just as Aunt at his head. Grandpa dashed inside just as Aunt at his head.

Boo was pickin' up the last stack of dishes. Grandpa says, "Good gracious, Aunt Boo, you won't have a dish in the house." Aunt Boo said, "Don't you interfere. I'll teach Slug to crack the handle off my best teapot."

Healthier Gives Hints On Proper Care of Children

This article is the second in a new series prepared by Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, dealing with health hints for the youngster who will start to school this Fall.

It is only a few weeks until school bells all over the county will be ringing and the school buses will be gathering the children from farm homes and taking them to their class rooms. Approximately 4,000 children will enter the county schools to resume their studies. There will be about 400 boys and girls who will go to school for the first time. Let us consider especially the problems of these little six-year-olds.

Consider what a great change is taking place in Junior's life at this time. What an ordeal he is about to undergo. He has always before been the center of his little world, but now he suddenly finds himself one among many. From a carefree life spent for the most part following his own desires, he finds that he must apply himself to new and strange tasks, learning at the same time to live peacefully with others. This change in environment means that not only his mental attitude must undergo a change, but that also his body must become accustomed to unusual conditions of work and living, and defend itself against more frequent exposures to the diseases of childhood.

Attention Necessary The degree of health that a child is to enjoy is determined largely by the day-to-day attention that his parents give him. It is the duty of the parent to determine the kind of food he eats, the amount of rest he gets, the character and the amount of exercise he takes in the fresh air and to guide him in the formation of proper habits of elimination and cleanliness.

It is important that the rapidly growing child be seen once each year by the family physician, even though the parents can see no evidence of ill health. At this time in Junior's life, just before he starts to school, it is doubly important that he be examined and any defects corrected, so that he will not start his school work with any handicap. He may have tonsils or adenoids that need treatment or surgery; he may have defects of eyes or vision that need attention; or he may need dental care.

Good health habits alone will paper and pages from a magazine dated March 5, 1937, were also around the torso.

In Brown Paper The hips, femur bones were wrapped in brown paper and stuffed into a cardboard box, labeled "General Seafood Corp., Boston."

The arms and leg fragments below the knees were in a box similar to the ones in which grocers receive crackers. Charles O. Nevel, acting chief of detectives, hoped that the boxes could be traced, but Merylo said he had been unable to trace several similar boxes in which other torsos were found.

Gerber said the murder had been committed about six months ago; that skin on parts of the body was preserved, dried and hardened and that before it was thrown in the dump it evidently had been stored some place where it was not exposed to weather—probably a refrigerator.

The dissection had been done with a knife, the marks of which were of the bone joints. Near the body was a pile of what appeared to be black floor sweepings from a store-room. Similar sweepings were found beside the body of victim No. 9, who was later identified as Rose Wallace. A schoolboy found her body June 6, 1937, in a burlap sack under a bridge abutment.

The 13th victim was found by Tod Bartholomew, who with his wife, Cecilia and another woman, had joined the crowd at the dump. It was 100 feet from the 12th body. It consisted of a skull, bearing dark, coarse hair, 15 vertebrae, 22 ribs, one left clavicle, two scapulas and pelvic bones.

Memphis Federal Agents Kill "Alabamian" After Officer Is Wounded

"MAY BE A FUGITIVE"

Roominghouse Woman Says

Slain Man Took Apartment Last Sunday

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 17—(UP)—A man slain by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was identified tentatively today as Fred Truesdale, "of Alabama." Whether this was his true name, whether he had a criminal record, was not known. In fact, nothing at all was known about him.

He was killed late yesterday by four G-men. J. E. Clegg, head of the local office, said he was killed while resisting arrest. Before he was killed, Clegg said, he wounded Agent Leo Nulty. Nulty's wound was a flesh wound of the thigh and was not serious.

The tentative identification was established by police. Mrs. Lucille Simon, manager of an apartment house, said he took an apartment from her last Sunday, registering as Fred Truesdale, "of Alabama," and paying a week in advance. Clegg did not identify him, but said his investigation was continuing.

Said to be Fugitive

Clegg said he had received information from a "confidential informant" that Truesdale was a fugitive. Four agents questioned him as to his identity and the ownership of his automobile. Later, he continued, the agents went back to question him again and the "individual pulled a gun and started shooting, seriously wounding one of our agents. After he had opened fire, the agents fired back in self defense and killed the individual."

The shooting occurred in the street near Truesdale's apartment. It was first reported that the G-men had killed either Ted Walters or Floyd Hamilton, notorious outlaws being hunted in the Southwest, and there was wild excitement.

Truesdale was driving an expensive automobile which, reportedly, had been stolen in Mobile, Ala.

City Leases Its Gold Mine

REDDING, Cal. (UP)—This city is probably the only one in the world that owns a municipal gold mine. The mine was leased to a Sacramento company which has been operating it for two months. The city's first monthly 10 percent cut amounted to $1,000, and for the second month $1,230.79.

VAGRANT FEARS WORK GANG

SANDUSKY, O.—(UP)—News of a "work gang" proposed by police to keep vagrants from the city intimidated a 75-year-old, shabbily dressed man who asked police for lodging. He said that he would like a place to sleep overnight, but add "I don't want to get into one of your 'chain gangs'."

Distress Not So Acute ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UP)—Pilot Gordon McKenzie was flying peacefully along when he noticed below a large pile of brush laid out in the form of a circle—it was a signal of distress. He landed. A trader rushed out to greet him and handed him—an order for cod liver oil and a jar of face cream.

Auto Thief Gives Advice OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—An Ottawa autoist had his car stolen but received a bit of advice from the thief who took it. After abandoning the car, the thief left a note: "If you take your keys out when you park your car, you won't have it stolen again."

Purposes Of 4-H Club Discussed In Article

The main purpose of the 4-H Club is educating and training of the youth to become better citizens and so be better able to fulfill his requirements in life.

The boy's 4-H program is laid along this basis. Their projects have been chosen from those in which they are most interested. The boys living in the country generally enroll in livestock, poultry or farming as they are naturally more inclined along these lines. For the boys in the towns or villages, projects such as gardening, shop work, handicraft have been worked out.

When a boy is ready to join the 4-H Club, he informs the county agent, telling of the projects in which he is interested. He is then placed in a club formed of boys interested in the project as he. This club holds meetings, chooses officers and works together toward its goal. Also each boy has his part to do and works toward a goal of his own. If the boy is interested in an animal he secures the best he can. He feeds and cares for it in the best way he knows how and keeps an accurate record of feed and costs.

At the end of the project he fills out his record sheet and puts it and his project on exhibition at a fair or a show of a like nature. Usually there are cash awards given for the best and he competes for these.

All during this time the boy has gained some valuable experience and perhaps has unconsciously learned a great deal about caring and raising for his project. All this should be of great value to him later on in life.

Not only does the club offer projects for education alone, but it has its social club, such as the Senior 4-H; its club congress for outstanding members and its camps and bands. All these are available to the boys and offer a great opportunity to all those interested.

Planes "Burst the Clouds" KALAMATH FALLS, Ore. — (UP)—County Judge Grizzle, en route to court, was told by a hobo, who accosted him for a coin, that the real cause of cloudbursts are airplanes, which set up currents of air that disturb atmospheric conditions that finally result in the bursting of clouds and the down-pour of rain. The judge is still figuring how much he really ought to have given the man for this new scientific information.

CRUSTLESS BREAD

HOW about the marvelous invention of two scientific gentlemen in Wuppertal-Barmen, Germany, for which Berlin registers enthusiasm? They have produced a device that bakes bread without any crust. It is a baking pan with a cover that can be screwed on, and has an absorbent lining, so that moisture vanishes from the dough and the resulting loaf is pure white and "all inside."

This may be all right for those who like it. But millions of Americans rise up indignantly and demand their crust, as against anything resembling a mere dumping. It would save ladies trouble, of course, in having no crust to cut off when making nifty party sandwiches. But no such enthusiasm is likely to be found among the men. As for boys, their supposed antipathy to bread crust has always been exaggerated.

A good deal depends on the crust, to be sure. But with the thick, tender, golden brown crust that is usually obtainable nowadays on bread, whether domestic or bakery, a surprising number of people are inclined to eat the crust and throw away the inside. This yearning, in fact, accounts for the popular "hard roll" and Italian "breadstick", also ordinary toast.

NATIVE POPULATION

IT is pleasant to read figures of the latest census taken in Yellowstone National Park. The enumerators report 520 black bears, 290 grizzlies, 14,300 elk, 900 deer, 800 buffalo, 800 antelope, 700 moose and 200 Rocky Mountain sheep.

Of course there are tens of thousands of smaller denizens, too, probably covering hundreds of interesting species.

All this adds immensely to our natural riches and our interest in life. Giving the original inhabitants a chance for survival is one of the finest things we have done.

COURTESY TO CHICKENS

PEOPLE are too rude about invading the privacy of henhouses, says H. W. Titus, poultry expert at a national research station in Beltsville, Md. Before intruding, it is better to rap on the door. "Then the chickens know what to expect, come to attention and face the door. There is no fluttering—no alarm."

Most of us haven't realized how sensitive chickens are to the finer nuances of behavior. But we know that courtesy usually pays among people, and we can probably get used to being courteous to chickens. Maybe even to mules, cows and pigs.

World At A Glance

—By— Charles P. Stewart

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's monopoly investigation seems to differ from the generality of such inquiries in this respect:

The average investigation begins with a definitely pre-conceived notion on the investigators' part as to what they presently will reveal; they think they know what is the matter and simply intend to uncover it. Their aim principally is to give publicity to evils which they believe to exist. Their investigations are not properly investigations, but grills of supposed culprits—or at least suspects.

The O'Mahoney group is convinced, indeed, that something is the matter with our economics, but the senator himself and, I think, most of his fellow investigators, are not certain just what it is; their purpose is to find out, not to convict anyone in particular of any specific offense or offenses.

NOT A QUIZ
Parenthetically:
Of course it is incorrect to speak of the "O'Mahoney committee". Both houses of congress and the executive branch of the government are represented in it. However, Senator O'Mahoney is chairman, and it is necessary to designate it somehow.

It is not an "anti-monopoly" quiz, either, though frequently so called. The Wyoming senator, at any rate, has done his best to make it clear that he is not "anti" any special interest. Instead, his proposition is that basic economic conditions have changed, while our economic system has not been changed correspondingly. His purpose is intelligent readjustment. He wants no one's "scalp". What he is after is constructive suggestion, whether he gets it from a conservative captain of industry or a radical.

CHANGING CONDITIONS
Within my own recollection this was a country of small businesses—little factories, no chain stores, hand work, competing railroads; they competed too much.

The trend toward consolidation was a natural development; no one's dirty work.

Moreover, it had its advantages. If I had to live now as primitively as I did when I was a boy (and my family was fairly well to do) it would kill me.

However, as materialities improved, there was an increasing loss in independence. When I was 21 if I lost my job I got another one; I did it during the depression of 1893. If I could not have done so I could have pre-empted a farm. That also would kill me now, but it would not have then.

OUR ECONOMICS ARCHAIC?
Oh, yes, I am more comfortable today, but not so safe. Yet, even for the sake of safety, I would not want time turned backward in its flight.

No running water! No toilets! Baths in washtubs! No heat except over the kitchen stove! Mule-drawn street cars! No flivvers! Much interstate travel in a caboose at the end of a freight train! I could not stand that, either.

And the younger generation? Why, it would be like a return to the Mesozoic period.

But, all this time, our economies have remained Mesozoic.

It is not necessarily Big Business' fault.

Big Business doubtless has been hogish, but the rest of us have been fat-headed, too.

ALL-AROUND READJUSTMENT
And somehow Big Business has kept ahead of agriculture.

Big Business is compact and organized. Labor is reasonably so likewise, and has given a tolerably good account of itself. But agriculture is diffused and has not combined effectively.

Consequently the balance has been bad, with bad results all around.

An all-around readjustment is what the O'Mahoney committee is shooting at.

WIEDEMANN NEW MYSTERY MAN

WASHINGTON — Mystery man of Europe today is Captain Fritz Wiedemann, military aide to Adolf Hitler.

It was Wiedemann who made a mysterious trip to the United States last year, supposedly on a secret mission to discourage Nazi-American activities. And it was Captain Wiedemann who descended from an airplane in London, just before the King and Queen, left for Paris, to make a secret Anglo-German proposal.

In the confidential files of the army and navy is a fascinating story of Wiedemann's history. It discloses that during the World War he was a lieutenant in the 16th Bavarian Infantry, in which Hitler also served.

One day while retreating under fire, the debris of a crumbling building fell upon one of Wiedemann's men and buried him. The young lieutenant leaped back and, despite heavy shell fire, pulled the man out.

He was Adolf Hitler.

Later the commanding officer recommended Hitler's promotion to the rank of company sergeant. He had a good record, but Wiedemann demurred.

"He's a dangerous man," Wiedemann is reported to have said. This was twenty years ago.

The war ended. Captain Wiedemann returned to his farm, settled down among the landed gentry, most of them ardent monarchists.

NAZI PURGE

Several years passed and the man he had pulled from the war-time debris became dictator of Germany, bent upon purging his most potent enemies. One day a list of those to be purged was placed before him. On the list he saw a familiar name.

"Fritz Wiedemann?" he asked. "Who is he?"

Hitler was informed he was a monarchist bent upon overthrowing the Nazi regime. Hitler ordered him brought in and announced: "You will be my first military aide."

Some time later—around May 20, 1938—German troops were concentrated around Czechoslovakia, and Goering and Goebbels were demanding an advance upon Prague. High officers who were present advised caution. They said they had not sufficient military supplies.

Finally, Hitler, exasperated, threw up his hands and ordered them all out of the room—that is, all except Wiedemann. He stayed to give a few words of counsel.

He pointed out that annexation of Czechoslovakia only two months after the Austrian putsch would antagonize world opinion, especially arouse the British.

If Hitler turned his powerful publicity machine loose on Czechoslovakia, on the other hand, and made it appear that the Sudeten German were an oppressed people, then by mid-August or September, Wiedemann advised, the British would have got reconciled to a German Czechoslovakia, and when the zero hour arrived, would not raise a hand.

A "scion" is the grandson of an American who made his own way.

Causes of Dizziness, Explosive Head Noises

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
QUITE OFTEN I am asked to discuss Meniere's disease. This condition is often defined as dizziness or vertigo, associated with head noises and partial deafness. The differentiation of Meniere's disease, strictly speaking, is somewhat different from this. Real Meniere's disease is quite rare.

The combination of dizziness with head noises and deafness, on the other hand, is common. It may come from absorption of poisonous products from the intestine, or from an infected tooth or tonsils. Those who worry about this combination of symptoms should remember that this is the usual form and can be relieved.

It may be that this set of symptoms is due to a chronic inflammation of the middle ear. Here the head noises prevail because the slow hardening of the tendons of the little bones of the middle ear causes tension and scraping between them which sound like explosions to the poor ear drum of the patient who owns them.

The reason that dizziness and deafness go together lies in the close anatomic association of the two branches of the eighth cranial nerve. One branch is that of the nerve of hearing—the auditory branch, and the other is the nerve of equilibrium—the vestibular branch.

Cause Is Mystery

Why these two functions should be united together is a mystery. Hearing and equilibrium do not have anything to do with each other. But united they are—one goes to the end organ of hearing, the other to the end organ of equilibrium—the cochlea and the vestibule respectively—two little bony nests of beautiful intricacy imbedded in the temporal bone just behind the external ear.

However mysterious their association, we have learned to use them together, and we would be very confused if they suddenly got separated.

Inside both of these bony organs there is a lining of extremely sensitive nervous cells, and over them flows a clear lymphatic fluid.

It is much like the eye, and real Meniere's disease is much like the eye disease of glaucoma, described yesterday.

Real Meniere's disease consists in a series of attacks of dizziness, nausea, vertigo, and noises in the ear, grafted upon a partial deafness on one side.

IF YOU WATCH two grades of suit declarers and try to note what distinguishes the better ones from the weaker ones, there is a feature which will surely become clear to you. The lesser ones will show too great a desire to take tricks by ruffing. The stalwarts will seem by comparison to prefer setting up long cards of some side suit, in either closed hand or dummy. In fact, that is about the first problem a star surveys, after sizing up the safety of his trump suit—the question of whether or not there is a side suit which may be established in some way.

CHAPTER 10

NOEL SAT silently thinking after Betsy had said that Fay Garwood was not her mother. For the first time Noel was beginning to believe Mrs. Garwood had been telling the truth when she had said that Betsy's mind was affected.

For a long while Noel sat there holding the child in her arms, without speaking. At last she said, "Betsy, you mustn't say things like that. You must promise me that you won't."

Betsy moved uneasily in Noel's arms. "All right, I'll promise you," she said unhappily.

"And you're sorry?" Noel coaxed.

There was a silence. Then Betsy's voice came plaintively, "I'm sorry if—if you want me to be."

"No, you must be sorry because you really are," Noel insisted.

"But I'm not—I hate her!" Betsy cried, another threat of hysteria in her voice.

Once again Noel was puzzled as to how to meet the situation. "We won't talk about it any more, dear," she said gently.

Betsy seemed relieved. She relaxed against Noel. After a moment she lifted her head and looked at Noel anxiously, "I'll try not to hate her, if—you won't go away."

Noel explained that if she went away it would only be for a little while. "Promise? Promise, you'll come back?" Betsy urged in a trembling voice.

"I'll come back. I give you my solemn promise," Noel told her.

The next day Noel almost wished she hadn't promised Laurie she would spend the night with her and come back to the Garwoods' early the next morning. She wasn't sure she should leave Betsy that long. And because the child clung to her, begging her pitifully to hurry back, it was late afternoon before Noel started to take advantage of her time off.

When she was downstairs, thinking it best to explain to Mrs. Garwood that she would return early in the morning, Noel started to knock on the door of the woman's sitting room. But she stopped, hearing angry voices inside. "I tell you I'm sick of staying in this house," Fay Garwood exclaimed shrilly.

"You're going to be a lot sicker, if you don't look out," Noel heard Hichens say in a most unbuttoned voice. "And next time, don't draw so much money, do you hear?" The man's voice sounded peremptory.

Noel stood there in surprise. Did Hichens have some strange sinister influence over Fay Garwood? From his tone he seemed to be the one in authority.

Noel heard him moving toward the door then. She stepped back, making it appear that she was just coming downstairs. When Hichens came out, she saw he had a book in his hand. It was "Correct English."

Evidently he didn't want her to see it for he put it quickly behind his back when he saw her standing there.

"I'm leaving," Noel told him. "Please tell Mrs. Garwood I'll return early in the morning."

The butler's face was again impassive.

"Also, Hichens," Noel began, looking him straight in the eye, "if I have any more telephone calls from my friends, I want to receive them."

Hichens gave a start, then quickly recovered. "Very good, Miss," he said stiffly.

It was nearly 6 o'clock when Noel reached the De Luxe. Laurie flashed her a quick smile. "Oh, Noel, it's so good to see you. I've missed you like everything."

A few minutes later Noel saw Julian coming across the street. Her heart gave a lurch. It had been ages since she had seen him. She felt. She had almost forgotten how good-looking he was with that little incipient dimple in his strong chin, and his adorable smile.

Then he was standing before her, both her hands held between his. "How many centuries has it been?" he asked.

He turned to Laurie and spoke

"How many centuries has it been?"

a word of greeting with the courtesy that was so much a part of him. "You're looking splendid, Laurie," he said.

A minute later he and Noel faced each other across a table. Julian ordered two substantial meals. "You're ordering too much," Noel remonstrated. "How on earth can I eat all that?"

"You're going to eat it and like it," Julian said with mock severity. He was studying her face. "Are you looking after yourself properly or shall I have to take steps about it?"

"What kind of steps?" she asked audaciously.

Julian shrugged a little. "Oh, I'd probably prescribe a big dose of castor oil and stand by and hold your nose until you swallowed it."

"Always the doctor," Noel scoffed. Then she said, "Julian, we may not have much time, and I want to talk to you seriously." She began telling him then about the queer Garwood household, and some of the things that happened there which she could not understand.

Julian listened attentively. "I know of the family," he said. "They're very prominent, wealthy people, belong to the real aristocracy."

"Aristocracy?" Noel questioned, feeling more bewildered.

Julian thought a moment or so. "I'm beginning to remember things about them now. Young Charlie Garwood was killed in an airplane accident a month before his child was born. When the child came, a friend of mine, an elderly doctor, was called on the case. After the child was old enough, Mrs. Garwood went to live abroad. She wanted to get far away from the tragedy, and said she could never bear to live in the ancestral Garwood home again. I understand she never really recovered from the shock of her husband's death. And I'm certain this is the first time she's been back since. The child must be about seven now, or possibly eight."

Noel nodded. "But Betsy seems actually to hate Mrs. Garwood. She even said she was not her mother."

Julian smiled understandingly. "Nervous children often have fancies like that. The child is probably slightly abnormal. She had a bad start in life, you know."

"Julian, I'm not sure I believe the child is Betsy Garwood. She seems normal in every way except when she comes to her mother. And then she becomes infuriated at the sight of her. There's something very peculiar about the people in that house, Julian," she finished earnestly.

Julian seemed impressed by her seriousness. Noel then told him about Hichens, whom she did not believe to be a butler at all. About Mrs. Garwood's bandaged arm, and the two checks she had had Noel write for her and sign. And yet Noel did not believe that her right hand was really injured since she had seen Mrs. Garwood using

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, August 17
A VERY lively and probably eventful day may be expected in writings, publishing and professional life. Advancement or some mark of distinction may be conferred by influential persons who may be attracted by originality, stability, unusual skill or hard work.

If This Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of splendid progress and achievement, perhaps in some outstanding professional, scientific or creative calling that will arrest the attention of those of prestige and ability. It is a propitious time to seek capital for such projects, wherein industry, originality and outstanding merit are convincing.

A child born on this day may have much versatility, originality and sound merit, attracting the solid support of those who may assist it to a place of importance in education or letters. It should be gracious and tactful.

MANY GARDENERS deplore the fact that their lovely begonias are not hardy, yet the begonia

The plants grow about two feet high and the large leaves are a light, yet rich, green. The leaf joints, as well as the veining of the leaves, and their undersides, are red. The flowers are a lovely flesh pink.

To grow happily begonia evansiana requires a cool, moist soil. It does especially well in the shade of tall trees.

Circleville Team Loses Thriller In Tournament

A Circleville team that completed in the southern Ohio softball tournament at Chillicothe, Tuesday evening, was eliminated but before losing to the Ironton Mearns, 4-3, provided the biggest thrills of the evening. Four games were contested, the one between the locals and Ironton being by far the most interesting of the.

The game, scheduled for seven innings, went through the tenth, Ironton scoring its winning run with two batters out.

The Mearns crew took a 3-0 lead in the first inning when with two men on base Weisenberg, first baseman, smacked a liner to right field. It went through Bill Hegele's legs for a home run. The locals had difficulty getting to Dopey Haley in the first four frames, but tallied a pair of runs in the fifth, Art Walker's double being the big blow, and chased another across in the sixth to deadlock the ball game at 3-all.

Although the Ironton team threatened several times it didn't have as many men on the paths as the Circleville crew did.

In the last of the tenth the first Ironton batter beat out a bunt and took second when Terhune tried to pick him off and the ball got away from Purcell. The runner went to third on a low pitch that went to the backstop. There was no one out at the time. The Circleville infield pulled in and was able to get the next two batters on easy grounders, holding the runner on third. But the next Ironton man smacked a clean single to center field driving in the winning runner.

Breaks Hurt

Bad breaks hurt the Circleville team's chances offensively. Bill Hegele smacked a hard drive down the left field line with runners on two bases only to have the blow go foul by inches; Buskirk lined into the shortstop's hands with the bases full and two out; Terhune turned the roving shortstop around with men on first and second and with his drive but a good throw forced a runner at third. The play of Art Walker at third base was the highlight of the entire tournament to date, the sterling athlete turning in several brilliant plays.

The tournament continues each evening at the lighted city park. Several thousand fans witnessed Tuesday's contests.

17,000 MAY SEE ARMSTRONG AND AMBERS SCRAP

Henry Writes Poem As Time For Fight Nears; Odds On Negro

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(UP)—Henry Armstrong surges out into a pool of hot light at Madison Square Garden tonight to try to convince friends and foes that he can lick any man in the world between 118 and 147 pounds.

The first man he must convince is a tough little Italian named Lou Ambers who will be in the ring with him, jabbing, fighting, ducking and running to protect his lightweight title.

If Armstrong wins — and the odds favor him three to one—he will be the first man ever to hold the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight championships at the same time. Win or lose, it will be a momentous night in the life of the little Negro and he met this crisis by, of all things, writing a poem:

"The rest of the world is blacked out
The only place left is this square
Under the glaring lights a man
I must rout
Or myself become a beaten thing."

The boys backing Armstrong insist his punching is more rhythmic than his meter.

Argument Delayed Week

This little argument between Ambers and Armstrong was supposed to have been settled a week ago tonight, but rain fell at the Polo Grounds and Promoter Mike Jacobs decided to take the bout inside Madison Square garden. It probably will turn out to be one of the smartest things he ever did. It looked like a skimpy $69,000 gate at the Polo Grounds, but in the garden tonight there probably will be 17,000 customers who will pay around $130,000.

Armstrong, a murderous puncher who has knocked out 35 of his last 38 opponents, is the boy who is drawing them. There is only one kind of battle Armstrong knows how to fight — to start punching when the bell rings and keep his fists flying until the round is over. He'll trade punches any time, gambling that if he lands one good one in 15 tries the man in front of him is going to fall. That's been his story all the way up from obscurity and tonight he's sticking to it.

REDS AND CUBS MEET; WALTERS TO PITCH GAME

CHICAGO, Aug. 17—(UP)—Still hopeful of climbing in the National league race despite their inability to hit a consistent winning pace, the Cincinnati Reds came here today to open a battle for third place in the standing with the Chicago Cubs.

"Bucky" Walters, who curbed a streak of wildness and downed the St. Louis Cardinals in his last start, was to pitch for the Reds with the rookie Vance Page opposing him. Page beat the charges of Manager Bill McKechnie last week at Cincinnati.

The Reds were thankful of the opportunity to move in here and change opposition after the merciless drubbing they took at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday.

With Ray (Peaches) Davis and "Jumbo Jim" Weaver performing like a pair of sandlot hurriers the Pirate batsmen had a field day to hang up a 10 to 0 victory. The drubbing was one of the worst of the season for the Reds.

Davis, who had stopped the Pirates in a one inning relief stretch Monday, was pounded out of the box in the third inning after giving up nine hits and then Weaver came on to be pasted for five more safeties.

DEMPSEYS NOT TO LEAVE HOME IN NEW YORK

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 17—(UP)—Mrs. Cecelia Dempsey, 73-year-old mother of Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, confirmed today that he is not coming here to avoid kidnap threats against his two daughters in New York.

After 24 hours of confusion, Mrs. Dempsey said she had only invited Jack for a visit this Fall. She denied he planned to change his residence from New York to Utah because of kidnapers, as had been reported.

In New York, Dempsey said his mother had been very sick recently and didn't "know how the reports started."

RE-REGISTRATION OF COUNTY RELIEF CLIENTS BEGINS MONDAY

ALL WHO GET AID MUST FILE APPLICATIONS

Only 45 Pickaway Families Getting Orders Regularly, Director Says

Re-registration of Pickaway county relief clients in compliance with recent state regulations will be started next Monday.

Forms for the registration were received Tuesday by D. H. Marcy, county relief director. Under the new applications, relief clients must furnish sworn financial statements.

After Saturday no relief will be issued to clients who have not re-registered. At the present time there are only 45 families in the county receiving regular direct relief orders every two weeks. Mr. Marcy said this number is the lowest in many months. Due to changes in classifications from last year comparative figures for August are not available.

Five men are employed at the present time on work relief, Mr. Marcy said. Ten others have been given part-time employment.

Mr. Marcy estimated the county's case load for relief at 150 families at the present time. The classification of the case load includes families which receive orders at various times but are not regular clients, and those who receive clothing.

The relief director left Wednesday afternoon to spend the remainder of the week on a visit in Wauson and Toledo.

Meanwhile, in the world's trouble centers:

CHINA—Fears were expressed in Shanghai that the Japanese might attempt to seize control of the international settlement which is now patrolled by American, British, French and other troops. The Japanese language press bitterly assailed United States and British forces for clashes with Japanese special service corps seeking to end Chinese patriotic and terrorist activities in the settlement. The foreign troops repeatedly turned back Japanese attempts to enter the settlement to seize Chinese suspects.

SPAIN—Premier Juan Negrin survived a minor cabinet crisis, replacing two Loyalist cabinet ministers who objected to a decree militarizing all war industries and seaports they feared it would interfere with autonomy of Catalonia and the Basque country. The government promised that such autonomy would not be infringed. Barcelona remained orderly. Fighting continued without definite changes on the war fronts.

GERMANY—The Reich was reported planning to call up a new group of army reservists in mid-September to take part in the current maneuvers. The Berlin press vigorously assailed foreign "war mongers" who sought to cause alarm concerning the army maneuvers.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—The Supreme Council for National Defense adopted a policy of "impassive preparedness" toward Germany but decided against any mobilization moves at present. Monsignor Andreas Hlinka, 74, leader of the Slovak Peoples party, died in the midst of his fight for greater minority rights. Deputy Carl Sidor may succeed him.

DAIRY SURPLUS PROBLEM READY FOR ATTENTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(UP)—

The Department of Agriculture reported today that milk production has reached the highest point in nine years and that the problem of dairy surpluses has become serious.

Milk production on Aug. 1 was 4 percent above Aug. 1, 1937, and was the highest since 1929, the department said. Storage holdings of dairy products were reported 5 percent larger than in June, 1937, and 4 percent larger than ever before reported for that month.

"Even though total milk production has been high, consumption of milk and cream in the principal fluid milk markets in recent months has been less than a year ago," the report said.

Prospects favor some improvement in consumer demand during the remainder of the year, the department said, but the prospective large production of dairy products and heavy stocks probably will prevent prices from rising seasonally.

DEWEY CHARGES TAMMANY CHIEF AIDED SCHULTZ SHOWERS BRING LITTLE RELIEF TO CIRCLEVILLE

Pecora Refuses Dewey Plea To Give Jurors Pencils To Keep Notes

was Mrs. Dewey, wife of the prosecutor.

As she came in Mrs. Hines exclaimed: "Oh, there's Mrs. Dewey."

Justice Ferdinand Pecora denied Dewey's request that jurors be equipped with pencil and paper to jot down the 50 to 75 names of racketeers and politicians he intends to bring into the case. Pecora said the jurors would have to depend "on their recollections."

In outlining the one conspiracy and 12 felony counts in the indictment against Hines, Dewey described the numbers game, or policy, racket as a "crooked" exploitation of "the poorer people" of New York city.

"They place penny bets, two cent bets, nickel and dime bets," he said. "Occasionally they bet a quarter, sometimes a dollar."

But the odds, he said "are 1,000 to 1 against their winning." The prosecutor spoke rapidly in conversational tone and described in detail the extent to which policy players go in their efforts to pick a winning number and collect 540-to-1 on their bet.

2, 5, 7 Lucky Numbers

He described their "dream books" and "superstitions." He said 2, 5 and 7 were considered lucky and that numbers addicts frequently bet on combinations of those digits.

Shortly before a holiday one year, he said, the number 257 came up "and broke every policy bank in the city."

He described the Schultz mob's methods of arriving at winning numbers. It used stock exchange statistics until the stock exchange found out about it and then employed pari-mutuel pay-offs at race tracks. That is the method still used by independent operators who survived the collapse of the Schultz empire.

Dewey named Otto (Abadaba) Berman, killed with Schultz in 1935, as the race track handicapper who juggled pari-mutuel figures by means of last minute bets which changed pay-offs and prevented heavily-wagered numbers from coming up.

O'CONNOR

policy on primary contests well defined. At his press conference yesterday afternoon he broadened his purge of conservative Democratic congressmen by denouncing Sen. Millard E. Tydings, D. Md., and Rep. John O'Connor, D. N. Y., and by leaving the implication that more names would be added to the list of those who have "betrayed the New Deal in the past and will again."

The attack on these anti-New Dealers, anticipated for several days, was the most bitter he has made—even more outspoken than his plea to Georgia voters last week for the defeat of Sen. Walter F. George, D. Ga.
